Hi Tony, I agree with your thought on 90 minutes for an agenda, and a 2 hour block for a room reservation, if needed.

With multiple agencies, and a lot of people potentially in the room, I could imagine the time going quickly if there is discussion on the details or history of what has been done. If we send questions ahead of time (TBD), that could help us keep to a shorter agenda.

Thanks,

Peter

Question: How long a meeting should we plan for? One to two hours sounds right to me, and I think I would start off looking for a 90 minute window.

I've looked at dates (with you guys earlier), and found that the following might work:

3/11 (though our normal conference spaces aren't available, I have reserved a conference room at Umpqua Bank downstairs that would accommodate a max of about 10 people, which is probably our minimum...).

3/18 10 – 4

3/19 10 – 4

I've created a Doodle Poll that may help us find the best spot on the calendar.
